UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., April 15 (Reuters).—Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy warned Israel tonight that its military operations against Lebanon and Syria could have far-reaching consequences for Middle East peace efforts.

"Israel, before anyone else. must choose between war and peace," he said in a statement to the Security Council.

raid on an Israeli settlement that left 18 civilians dead.

If Israel wants peace, it must stop forthwith all "irresponsible actions," Mr. Fahmy said. But Mr. Fahmy did not repeat to the council remarks he made earlier to reporters in the delegates' lounge that Egypt would "not stand by and let them [the Israelis] strike at Lebanon and Syria."

Mr. Fahmy said then that Egypt will strike at Israel if Israeli forces continue to escalate their retaliation against Syria and Lebanon because of Palestinian guerrilla attacks.

The Israelis risk setting the whole peace agreement back," Mr. Pahmy said.

Egypt has maintained a ceasefire with Israel since January. but the official warned that this would be broken if Israel continued what he described as "escalations" on the northern front in response to the guerrilla raid at Kiryat Shemona last week, in which 18 Israelis were killed. In Jerusalem, authoritative government sources tonight expressed surprise and disappointment at the warning issued by Mr. Fahmy. The sources said that Syria has escalated military action along the northern frontier in emulation of Egyptian tactics before the disengagement-of-forces agree-

In Cambodian Bombing

High Court Declines Again To Rule on Nixon's War Power

By Warren Weaver Jr.

WASHINGTON. April 15 NYT).-The Supreme Court refused today to review a decision upholding President Nixon's right to bomb Cambodia without any authorization from Congress. The vote was unanimous and there was no opinion.

The decision was the latest in a series of occasions on which the high court has dodged answering the question of whether American participation in the war in Southeast Asia was unconstitutional because Congress had never formally declared war.

Without giving any hint of their reasoning, the justices de-clined to take jurisdiction of a case brought by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and four Air Force officers in an effort to establish the legal principle that a president could not declare war on his own authority. The effect of the high court decision was to leave standing a ruling by the U.S. Court of Ap-peals for the 2d Circuit that the legality of the Cambodian operation was a political question not reviewable by the courts and that the initiators of the suit lacked standing.

Appellate Ruling The Court of Appeals also held that Congress had implicitly acknowledged the legality of the bombing when it ordered the military to end it by Aug. 15, 1973. The Justice Department had urged the high court to let the lower court ruling stand, because a political question was involved and because no real legal controversy remained once the Cambodian action had been ended. Rep. Holtzman said that she was "disappointed but not surprised" by the court's action, and expressed regret that the justices had not taken advantage of the opportunity to declare that a president cannot wage war unilaterally.

Backed by the American Civil Liberties Union, Rep. Holtzman and the Air Force officers insisted that there was an important continuing question of the President's authority involved and that the Appeals Court ruling had set "a disastrous precedent" that should be corrected.

Rebel Zapata, Dead 55 Years, Still Sets Mexican Tempers Aflame

By Stanley Meisler

MEXICO CITY, April 15 .-Many Mexicans are coming for-ward these days to defend the reputation of Emiliano Zapata, one of the heroes of the Mexican Revolution.

It may seem odd that Mexicans feel forced to defend one of their heroes, but Mexican history, a tronicle of much anguish and chaos, has its confusions. Zapata is one of them. To confuse matters more, President Venustiano Carranza, the man who probably ordered Za-pata's death in 1919; is also considered a hero of the revolution. The constitution that now rules Mexico was promulgated during Carranza's administration.

The latest debate resulted from a lawsuit filed recently by Gen. Jose Juan Guajardo, the brother of the man who killed Zapata in 1919. The general claims that a four-year-old movie. "Zapata," defames his brother, the late Col. Jesus Maria Guajardo.

The lawsuit, after several months of hearings, was finally dismissed April 3 by the attorney general of Mexico. He said it was filed too late and, in any case, the makers of the movie did not intend to hurt anybody's reputation. But the dismissal of the suit has not ended the controversy.

Gen. Guajardo, in fact, has threatened to punish the star of the movie, Antonio Aguitar, himself if the courts fail to do so. Armed with a .45-caliber pistol and an ammunition belt, the cral showed up at a pretrial hearing and threatened, "If the law does not punish him. I myself will execute Antonio Aguilar. . I have the guts to do that and much more.

Gen. Guajardo discounted the usual historical version of how his brother killed Zapata. "I have all the newspapers of the time," he after the revolution.

said "and they speak of my brother as a hero. That is what counted. That is the truth, and not what is written later by historians. They are men who know nothing."

The movie, he went on, changes the true facts of history and makes it appear that my brother... was a coward" and a traitor.

What are the historical facts? During the Mexican Revolution of 1910, Zapata led the peasants of the south in an uprising against Porfirio Diaz, the authoritarian president who had ruled Mexico for a quarter of a century.

The revolution ousted Diaz. But, after his fall. Zapata could not accept the leadership of the men who took over the country, not even of President Francisco Madero, the first hero of the revolution. This period is now regarded by historians as a time of chaotic dispute among the revolutionaries that he was a selfless man con-cerned about the needs and rights of the peasants.

But to the men in power, who also considered themselves revo-lutionaries, Zapata threatened stability, order and their ability to govern. His threat had to be removed.

President Carranza ordered an offensive against Zapata and put Gen. Pablo Gonzalez in charge. In 1919, Gonzalez, who looked on himself as a possible candidate for president, worked out a scheme to trap Zapata. It is this trap that the movie narrates.

The details have been described by historian John Womack Jr. in his book "Zapata and the Mexican Revolution." According to Mr. Womack, Col. Guajardo had been tailed for carousing in a local cantina instead of carry-

Zapata did not prolong his re-bellion to get the presidency for himself. Most historians agree ing out orders to pursue Zapata, Lapata, hearing news of the scandal wrote to the young Guajardo and proposed that he join Zapata's troops. But the letter was intercepted by Gonzalez, Gonzalez then accused Col.

Guajardo not only of being a drunken lout but a traitor as well, and he waved Zanata's letter at him as proof. To show his loyalty. the colonel agreed to become the major agent in the trap against Zapata. Col. Guajardo wrote to Zapata, promising to bring his units into Zapata's ranks. To demonstrate his new loyalty to Zapata, Col. Guajardo declared himself in rebellion, captured a government post, arrested former Capata followers who had defeeted to the government, and shot them.

On April 10, Zapata rode to Chinameca hacienda, in his native state of Morelos, to mect Cel. Guajardo. As he drove toward the gates of the hacienda. an honor guard of Col. Guajardo's troops suddenly opened fire, killing him instantly.

In the view of Gen. Gonzalez, Col, Guajardo and his surviving brother, the murder of Zapata was a lawful act carried out under the orders of a lawful government.

In a recent article, former President Emilio Portes Gil, who ruled Mexico from 1928 to 1930, said that 'Gen. Gonzalez had once told him, "I believe that Zapata died in the way he deserved. He was a bandit, and if he were resurrected some day, and I had a way of killing him again, I would do it with pleasure."

The lawsuit, however, has not helped foster that point of view. Instead, it has generated a great deal of new praise for Zapata and much condemnation of Col. Gua-

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla., April 15 (AP).—About 5.000 Americans have sont President Nixon more than $42,650 to help him pay a bill of almost half a million dollars in back taxes, the White House said today.

A spokesman said that Mr. Nixon felt he could not accept the contributions and would return those whose donors were identified. The rest, he said, would be given to the Red Cross for tornado disaster relief.

The contributions range from six cents from a school child to $5,000 from a businessman, the White House said. The White House added that the letters were unsolicited, but supporters of the President and other groups had suggested campaigns to help Mr. Nixon pay the tax bill.

Small Amounts

The White House said 1296 anonymous letters contained $2.-581.50 m cash contributions, mostly in small amounts. Besides the mailed contributions. the White House said that tele-

Kissinger Meets With Peking Aide

NEW YORK, April 15 (IHT) .-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger entertained the deputy premier of China. Teng Hsino-ping. at a dinner here last night, and two diplomats held what were described as "very friendly talks and a good review of Suno-American relationships."

The Chinese official, the highest-ranking diplomat of the People's Republic to visit the United States, is here for a UN General Assembly session on raw mate-rials and development, which Mr. Kissinger addressed today.

"Both confirmed that Sina-American, relationships would continue on the course charted in the Shanghai communique issued on President Nitton's visit to China in February, 1972, and Rissinger's subsequent "isits to China." George West, the State Department spokesman, said after the meeting between Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Teng.

"If the strong attempt to impose their views. they will do so at the cost of justice and time provoke upheaval," Mr. Kissinger said. "If the weak resort to pressure, they will do so at the ray of world prosperity and thus provoke despair."

Discussing the sharp rise in petroleum prices, the American diplomat said: "No nation has an interest in prices that can set off an inflationary spiral which in time reduces income for all "

He noted that the price of fertilizer had risen in direct proportion to that of oil, putting the fertilizer price beyond the reach of many of the poorest nation and contributing to worldwide food shortages.

A comprehension by producers and consumers of their mutual needs is essential. Mr. Kissinger "All nations share an interest in agreeing on a level of prices which contributes to an expanding world economy and which can be sustained," he declared.

The principles that apply in energy apply as well to general problems of raw materials, he continued.

He said that it was tempting to think of cartels of raw-material producers to negotiate for higher prices, but that such a course could have serious consequences for all countries.

"Large price increases coupled with production restrictions inpotential disaster—global inflation followed by global recession from which no nation could escape," he told the 125nation assembly.

"Commodity producers will discover that they are by no means insulated from the consequences of their restrictions on supply or the escalation of prices.

"A recession in the industriailedcountries sharply reduces demand." he went on. "Uneconomica prices for raw materials ac-celerate the transition to alter-

"And as they pursue industrial-ization, raw-material producers will ultimately pay for exorbitant commodity prices by the increased costs of the goods they must import. Thus, the optimum price is one that can be maintained over the longest period at the level that assures the highest real income.

Survey Questions Crime Figures in U.S. Cities

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP). -Crime in the nation's five largest cities is more than twice as high as police figures show. according to a government study. The survey disclosed a crime rate five times as high as police figures in Philadelphia, almost three times as high in Chicago. Detroit and Los Angeles, and slightly more than twice as high in New York,

The study, conducted by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the Census Bureau, showed that 68 of every 1 600 Detroit residents are likely to be victims of serious crime.

The rates were 63 per 1.000 for Philadelphia, 56 per 1.000 for Chicago, 53 per 1.000 for Los Angeles and 36 per 1.000 for New

8 Smaller Cities

For eight smaller cities, the rates were 48 for every 1,000 questioned in Atlanta, 46 in Baltimore, 54 in Cleveland, 43 in Dallas, 67 in Denver, 47 in Newark, 59 in Portland, Ore., and 42 in St. Louis. New York City, which has long endured international notoriety as a city of crime. was the least violent of all 13 American cities surveyed.

The findings show that not only do New Yorkers have a significantly smaller chance of being raped, robbed or assaulted than do residents of the 12 other large cities, but also that households in New York were far less likely to be burgiarized.

Results of the study, made public last night, carry "a strong message of public apathy toward its criminal justice institutions bordering on contempt." said LEAA administrator Donald Santarelli.

"The crime survey results demonstrate that in an astounding number of instances Americans simply do not think it is worthwhile to report to public authorities that they have been the victims of criminal acts," he add-

The report is the second stemming from a $10-million-a-year project to measure the extent of crime with interviewing techniques developed by census takers. The earlier report suggested that crime was twice as high as reported in Atlanta, Baltimore, Cleveland, Newark, Dallas, St. Louis, Denver and Portland, Ore.

In the latest study, about 150 interviewers questioned persons in about 25,000 households and

The interviews were conducted in early 1973. Those questioned were asked whether they had been raped, robbed, burglarized or assaulted during 1972 and if so, whether they had reported the crime to police. They were questioned extensively about details of criminal incidents and their reasons for not reporting

Of those who did not report personal crime, 34 percent said they did not because of lack of proof or they felt "nothing could be done." Twenty-eight percent did not consider the crime important enough to report, and lesser percentages said the "police would not want to be bothered. it was too inconvenient, it was a personal matter or they were afraid of reprisal.

The figures ran about the same for those who chose not to report household burglaries and larcenies. For the five larger cities, the report showed a total of 3.1 million crimes committed in 1972. The LEAA cautiously compared that figure with the 1.1 million total listed in the FBI uniform crime reports, the only other collection of national crime statis-tics. The FBI figures are a compilation of statistics reported by local police agencies and have been widely criticized as inaccurate and subject to political

To Brazilians, millions of whom believe in spirits and witchcraft, it is part of a growing file of evidence that Ernesto Geisel's government is a pe frio (literally, a cold foot, but in Brazilian slang a curse, or bad luck on the land). No matter what the cause, Brazil has been hit by a formidable series of setbacks since Gen. Geisel came openly onto the BUENOS AIRES, April 15 Argentina and a virtual dictator that was paid, Since then, it has from 1948 to 1955. Their residual Friday and his release 15 hours later in Cordoba, a provincial capital, illuminated most of the anomalies of the odd underground political war that has vaxed and waned in the country for six years under six presidents.

On one side, the urban guerrillas—kidnapping, murdering and robbing for their extreme left ideal that chaos must precede revolutionary change—seem to be murderously efficient terrorists. But they are apparently subject to attacks of conscience.

On the other side, there is the government led by Juan Peron, the 78-year-old populist President who has sworn to exterminate urban guerrillas. But there are signs—the mistakes made by militants and the absence of arrests - that the government campaign has not, in six months, gone much beyond slogans for radio advertisements.

They keep saying that they are going to wipe out the guerrillas. an experienced foreign observer said. But they do not seem to be willing to do the necessary things. There is a high political prace to pay.

Fiercely Brutal

The urban guerrillas who kidnapped Alfred Laun 3d. an in-formation and cultural affairs officer in Cordoba, on Friday morning were fiercely brutal. They shot him in the stomach when Mr. Laun fought back in the living room of his bachelor home, pistol-whipped him, dragged him outside and threw him into a waiting car. But the terrorists of the People's Revolutionary Army also were apparently concerned for Mr. Laun's Fifteen hours later, they laid him on the ground between two trucks, wrapped in two biankets with two plastic flasks of plasma laid on his chest, their contents dripping into his arms.

Doctors said today that Mr. Laun was "out of danger."

The prospects for an end to the violen, political warfare between right and left in Argentina, which an Argentine sociologist calls civil war in the larval stage, are not easy to state. The war began with an unsuccessful rural guerrilla campaign in the northwest in 1965, After a kull of two years under military rule, the nuclei of the five urban guerrilla organizations now active in Argentina had been formed. Their members were middle-class Marxists and rightist Nationalists, some of them workers, who came together in the heterogeneous movement led by Mr. Peron from his exile in Madrid.

Four of the organizations considered themselves Peronists. Their tactics against three military governments from 1968 to 1973 were governed by the slogan "Fight and he will return." the label of the campaign to bring sidiary of Firestone Tire Co., and back Mr. Peron president of held him for a $3-million ransom aims were submerged in another in ransom money, including a slogan, "History passe: through Peronism." The fifth organization, the Peo-ment broke up that country's guerrilla organizations by using torture on suspects and their friends and encouraging policestate tactics. Carlos Marighelia was shot and killed in a police ambush that also wounded two innocent bystanders. The Brazilian government thought nothing of cutting traffic along the main north-south highway in their country for three days when the army thought it had another guerrilla leader surrounded in a rural region bordering the highsurfaced, but the People's Revo-lutionary Army continued its actions. In June it kidnapped president of the Argentine subrecord $14.2 million paid by the Exxon Corp. last month. Victor Samuelson, the Exxon executive held for ransom, is still being held prisoner.

Mr. Peron promised emergency measures against terrorism and declared war on the People's Revolutionary Army the day after his election a, president on Sept 28 by having the group declared illegal. The guerrillas responded the next day by assassinating Jose Rucci, the country's most powerful labor leader and Mr.

Peron's most visible supporter. Since then, instability brought on by political violence has become the most vexing public issue in Argentina, Mr. Peron has promised all-out campaigns against terrorists, encouraged a frequently bloody purge of leftists in his own movement and passed a tough anti-terrorism law, But enforcement has somehow lagged well behind intention.

In contrast, the Rev. Robert Skagen, a Roman Catholic priest in Phoenix, Ariz., has to make appointments three weeks in advance for parishioners seeking his counsel because he is the only full-time pastor of a church that

In the Catholic Church, the number of priests is declining while church incobership grows. Priest shortages are reported in areas of the South and the Southwest. And the need is expected Competition for good pastoral jobs is keen and, in the Episcopal Church at least, there is "significant clergy unemployment for the first time in history," according to the denonunation's vocational director, the Rev.

The reasons cited for the opposing trends are complex and not really comparable. The decline in Catholic teminary enrollment is generally attributed at least in part to the reforms stemming from the Second Vatican Council (1962-65) The increasing number of

A recent study at the University of Notre Dame warned that the priest "crisis" would become "real rather than abstract" as fewer priests were available to replace those who retired or died.

Th: study noted that while there were 53,796 elergymen and 40.871.302 Roman Catholics in the country in 1970-a ratio of one priest for every 159 Catholicsthe figures for 1973 were 56.969 priests and 48.460.427 Catholies, or one for every 851 Catholics. The number of priests decreased from a peak of about 80,000 in the late 1960s while the Catholic population grew steadily.

The trend in Protestant churches does not hold for various evangelical denominations whose growing memberships have mercasing a novel torpedo-mine that it considers one of the most radical advances in the 400-year history ol mine warfare.

In contrast to the present stationary mines, which depend upon a ship or submarine passing in their immediate vicinity, the new mine will send out a torpedo to seek out and destroy its submarme target.

As seen by top naval officers, the new mine should revive interest in mine warfare, which has been largely ignored in recent strategic planning. They also believe it will prove to be a significant adjunct in maintaining control over the Atlantic sea lanes if war breaks out in Eu-

The principal threat to allied control over the Atlantic sea lanes is not so much Soviet surface ships as about 170 submarines attached to the Soviet northern fleet based in Murmansk. Under present conditions. naval planners believe it would take at least 60 to 90 days to neutralize this threat.

The military value of the new mine, as explained by highly placed naval planners, would be to keep some of the Soviet submarines blocked in the Norwegian sea-to the north of the principal Atlantic sea lanes-or to destroy the submarines as they attempt to return to their home base for resupply.

Navy plans call for using the nunes to set up barriers across the two principal access routes for Soviet submarines into the Atlantic Ocean. One mine field would be laid in the Denmark

Mysteries in Libya

It is consistent with a time in which there are relatively few governments with clear mandates and well-defined authority that questions should be asked about Libya. The announcement of a diminution in the functions of Col. Meamer Qadhafi-Libyan head of state and commander of its armed forces -has been variously interpreted in many quarters. Has he been eased out of the practical workings of the Libyan government, or does he retain his old power, merely preferring to spend more time on ideology and mass organization?

Either is plausible. Col. Qadhafi is a zealot, in the tradition of the Senussi who long ruled much of Libra in fact during Turkish and Italian occupations, and who gave the country its first acknowledged king -Idris. As such, he seems to be primarily interested in spreading his own brand of Mos-Iem revolution, and exerting the kind of personal influence which won him praise from such oddly assorted quarters as Yugoslavia's Tho and the far-out Christian sect of the Children of God.

But it is precisely those characteristicsc: the prophet, rather than the statesmanwhich have estranged Libya from many of Ito Arab associates and neighbors. The failure of the intended union of Egypt and Libya is apparent-Egypt has even given citizenship to King Idris, who was deposed by the Qadhafi coup. And the more recent effort at union between Libya and Tunisia seems to have had the same fate. It would not be difficult to understand why more pragmatic leaders in the Libyan military government might profer to relegate Col. Qadhafi to the role of thinker and talker, while going about the actual business of running the country themselves.

They insist that this is not the case, but from outside Libya the truth is very hard to grasp. And at any rate, Col. Qadhafi does remain as the personal symbol of the Libyan regime. He is still the Mao of the Libyan revolution, whoever may be its Chou, and whatever may be their exact relationship. And Libya's role in the world will have to be judged on that basis, even if the government in Tripoli takes a more practical tack on specific matters.

The kind of revolution projected by Col. Qadhafi for his own country and for export is far from clear. At its heart is puritanical Mohammedanism, with the drive that brought the Wahhabis to power in Arabia and enabled the followers of the Mahdi to rule the Sudan. That, thus far, the colone! has used oil and oratory rather than weapons in his jihad does not diminish the problem he poses for other Arab states-or for the world generally. His most recent commentthat the massacre at Kiryat Shemona last week was "long overdue"—is a very painful key to the nature of that problem. There are mysteries in Libya, but perhaps the greatest of them is Moamer Qadhafi himself.

Global Interdependence

In his opening address to the special seszion of the UN General Assembly, Secretary-General Waldheim dealt persuasively with issues whose urgency has unfortunately been overshadowed by divisive international politics. Many of Mr. Waldheim's arguments in support of a rational approach to the production and consumption of the world's resources deserve a sympathetic response from

The question that hovers over the conference is now to break through the wall of suspicion that the proceedings may merely be a pretent for another round in the power struggle between the developing and the industrialized nations, Indeed, the representatives of China and the Soviet Union have already availed themselves of the forum to replay the record of their own hostilities. along with a bid for the allegiance of the have-not countries and the politics of the

Even many delegates who applaud the speeini session's stated purpose simply believe that President Boumedienne of Algeria proposed the conference primarily to divert attention from the Arab nations' recent oil manipulations, with their catastrophic impact on many developing countries. Conscious of such fears and suspicions, Mr. Waldheim pleaded for recognition of a new need for a policy of interdependence and for agreements which would render that interdependence "a positive rather than a negative

Without what Mr. Waldheim called "the political will" for action, the conditions of acute maldistribution of raw materials, dramatized by the recent confrontations over oil, will propel mankind either toward starvation or to industrial breakdown, respectively, in poor and rich nations, with similarly disastrous social, economic and political consequences in both.

There are many legitimate differences in perspective among various nations and groups, as they contemplate the effects of rising prices or growing shortages in raw materials and food, and as they try to balance instant demands for natural resources with the long-term necessity of preserving man's natural environment. Such differences, however, must not be allowed to detract from what Secretary-General Wald heim called the main theme of the special session-"To secure the optimum use of the world's natural resources with the basic objective of securing better conditions of social justice throughout the world."

Israeli Raids

Gen. Dayan's threats no longer terrorize anybody because the Palestinian and Lebanese people do not stand alone. All Arab governments and peoples will unanimously respond to any Israeli action against Lebanese territory. [Gen. Dayan's warning followed last week's Palestinian guerrilla attack on the Israeli frontier town of Kiryat Shemona which resulted in the death of 18 Israelis.] Miryat Shemona has been and will continue to be one of the Palestinian commandos' strategic targets despite all Israeli precautions. We predict that Palestinian commando operations will cover the depth of Israel until the ultimate objective is achieved.

-From Al Anram (Cairo).

The Kiryat Shemona operation proves that the Palestinian commandos have the potential to launch severe blows aganist the depth of the Israeli enemy, Dayan and other Israeli leaders should remember that their arrogance of power cost Israel dearly in the October war and was the direct cause of Israel's current political crisis.

-From Al Akhbar (Cairo).

If the raids were simed at halting the guerrillas, their effects are questionable and perhaps even harmful to Israel. The punishment of any of those kidnapped will be based on doubtful legality. Lebanon's Army is illequipped to atop the movement of small guerrilla groups in difficult terrain. Unrest always carries the risk of unsettling Israel's most stable and peaceable neighbors. This is so whether the unrest results from the controlitation between the Lebanese authorities and the Palestinians or from southern Lebanese worried, like the inhabltants of north Israel, about security,

A more basic worty than the terrorist attack is Mrs. Golda Meir's resignation which has left Israel without an effective government. # The U.S. Winter of Discontent

By Anthony Lewis

DOSTON-Patrick Caddell, the public-epinion analyst, rummaged through the papers mounded on his desk and read out some figures.

"It frightens ma," he said. "We're in a country that has alyways been optimistic-endless frontiers, today better than yesterday, we can bend events to our will, all of that. But now it is different. Most people be-lieve ther have lived through the high point of the American

That sober conclusion emerges from a historical series of attitude surveys, measuring people's feelings about the state of the United States. Those surveyed are asked to indicate, on a scale of 0. the worst, to 10 the best, what is good and bad for America. Then they are asked where they think the country stands now on that scale, where it was five years ago and where it will be in five

1959 Views

In 1959, when America was emerging from a recession, such a survey showed a mean figure of 6.5 for the past, 6.7 for the present, 7.4 for the future, People felt things had improved and would be better in the future. In 1964 the curve of optimism was even steeper: the past 6.1, the present 6.5, the future 7.7. By 1971 the results were different: the past 6.2, the present 5.6, the future 6.2. Those surveyed seemed to see the country in a trough. This year the figures are more scriking still According to Caddell, the latest put the past at 6.3, the present at 4.5, the future at 5.0. If they are representative, they mean that Americans now see their past as golden. That is indeed a profound change in a country's self-perception.

Why has it happened? Caddell mys there was a sharp break in year ago, as the Watergate story broke open. But he thinks Water-gate has had a significance be-yond its own subject, triggering latent doubts and fears created by Vietnam and inflation and other problems. "Watergate has been the intensifier," he says.

When people are asked particular questions, their answers indicate a growing feeling of frustration, of discontent with leadership, of cynicism. These are some statements that have been read to Americans in surveys. with the percentage who agreed in different years:

"What you think doesn't count with people in power anymore." 1966-37 percent. 1974-61 percent.

"People running the country really don't care what happens to people like you." 1966-22 percent. 1974—55 percent.

"The government has consistently lied to the American people over the last 10 years." 1971—55 percent. 1974—68 percent.

Caddell thinks the figures point to a crisis of confidence in institutions, and he therefore believes the Democrats would be quite wrong to view them smugly. amazed at the apparent belief of some Democratic strategists that the shrewd course now is to preach happiness tell people they have never had it so good.

The public is so angry, he fears, that unless it gets straight talk from politicians it will be game for demagogic villain-hunting. He notes that recent surveys show 65 percent agreeing with the statement, "Things are too complicated for the average person to understand." In the past. agreement with that statement has corollated closely with support for George Wallace. The question one naturally asks is to what extent the discontent focuses on President Nixon and Watergate. Caddell emphasizes that the underlying problems of economics and world relations

Paris Myths

Re "Brushing Away the Myths About Americans in Paris" by Colin Gravois (IHT, March 18): The paragraph on medical students was terribly misleading. They don't come here because. . . "it is cheaper and easier to get in." They come because they are serious about becoming medical doctors and U.S. medical schools had no room for them.
Yes, it is cheaper—for tuition, but not the cost of living. As far as being easier to gain admittance to medical school here-No! The only advantage here is that one is given the opportunity to prove his ability. For example, Browsals Univergitt last year admitted 900 students and there were only 210 places for the second year. That is hardly easy, especially for foreigners.

My guess is that there is a reservoir of good feelings about this country, of hope and belief, that would be released in a flood by Mr. Nixon's departure. A woman named Dolores Dolan put it well in a recent letter:
"I have had a fantasy about

Bernard Levin From London:

Every time further restrictions are imposed on the immigration of colored people, the traffic in illegal immigrants increases.

Frost who, on the morrow of John Kennedy's presidential victory in 1960, said simply, "The Goths have left the White House." Well, heaven knows the Goths have not left Downing Street; indeed, they have taken full, grim possession of it. But in one corner of the government, at any rate, civilization is the order of the day. Roy Jenkins is back at the Home Office (he was home secretary in Mr. Wilson's previous administration, before becoming chancellor of the Exchequer), and is once again taking up the hopeless task or bringing some degree of civilization into a place which for well over 50 years has had, with the briefest of intervals, a fullyjustified reputation for every kind of political and legal swinishness (I have not the smallest doubt that the majority of its officials not only believe in witches, but believe in burning tham). Almost the first thing Mr. Jenkins did on taking office this time was to order the release of a man who had spent five years in jail for a crime of which he was wholly innocent, and to disclose in some embarrassment (for even a home secretary like Mr. Jenkins still has to work with his officials) that the truth about his innocence had begun to emerge two-and-a-half years ago, only to be blocked by the Home Office.

Controversy

That, as I say, was almost the first thing Mr. Jenkins did on being reappointed home secretary.

The next thing he did landed him in rather more controvery; yet it was even more humane, civilized and necessary.

One of the most pitiful stories of postwar Britain has been the way in which, every time further restrictions are imposed on the immigration of colored people, the traffic in illegal immigrants indoesn't seem, it undoubtedly is so that even the kind of living that an illegal immigrant can scratch in Britain, together with the necessity to live in the fear of being found out and deported, is still preferable to the condi-tions in the countries, such as India and Pakistan, from which they come. Now the total number of such immigrants is, of course, impossible to determine precisely; but it is very unlikely indeed to be more than a very few thou-sand. The traffic, however, apart from being abominable and cruel (many such would-be immigrants have paid the smugglers all that they possessed, only to be caught the moment they came ashore), has given right-wing, and outright racist, opponents of colored immigration plenty of opportunity to keep their unsavory pot boil-ing, with scare stories about ONDON—I think it was Robert hordes of illegal immigrants overrunning the country.

There was, however, one enormous attraction for illegal immi. grants, over and above the better conditions they could find in Eritain. The law said that an illegal immigrant, if he or she had been able to remain in the country undetected for a considerable time (the period was changed at least once) could stay legally. Under pressure for further restrictions on colored immi-gration, the Conservative govern-ment passed a law in 1971—it came into effect at the beginning of 1973—retrospectively nullifying this provision. That is, not only was the immunity obtained by residence withdrawn for all newly-arrived illegal immigrants; it was withdrawn from those who had arrived earlier and gained it. Such retrospective canceling of an immunity was repugnant even to many who believed that the immunity should be abolished for further illegal immigrants, for three reasons. First, retrospective legislation of any kind is rightly abhorrent to most people; second, at the time the bill was actually being passed, the fact that it would be removing the immunity retrospectively was concealed from Parliament and the coun-try; and third, it laid many illegal immigrants, who had attained the immunity and come out of hiding, open to blackmail

Immunity Restored

Now Mr. Jenkins has not canceled the main provision of the 1971 act, which said that no immigrant arriving illegaly after it came into force could ever gain immunity. But what he has done is to restore the immunity to those who had gained it and had it retrospectively taken away by the legislation. The number of people involved is small; about 3,000 to 4,000, it seems .Like other legal immigrants, they will be allowed to bring their dependent relatives; this may involve, over the next few years, a further 6,000-8,000 immigrants. Perhaps, in all, 10,000 more colored faces in Britain, their arrival spread over a long period, will result from Mr. Jenkins's action, while no immigrant who entered illegally after Jan. 1, 1973, will ever be able to gain legal immunity from deportaion.

It isn't very much; but it should hardly be necessary to add that it is too much for some. The far-right Monday Club has already started howling, bandying wholly imaginary figures about, and the decision will be used as a stick with which to beat Mr. Jenkins, and indeed the government generally (for of course so politically fraught a decision would not have been taken by Mr. Jenkins without consultation). All the same, it is a heartening episode.

DAMASCUS.—For a month now Syria has stood toe to toe with Israel, slugging it out in battles around the Golan Heightz. Soldiers in battle dress can be seen everywhere in the streets. Stands Alone

Syria has been obliged to undertake all these activities because it finds itself, as often in the past, standing alone as the great partisan of Arab unity. The Arab world has split into two currents of opinion, moving in opposite directions.

One current is the so-called "front of refusal." It includes the countries and movements activeiy hostile to the efforts being made by the United States to act as honest broker in arranging a settlement between Israel and the Arab states.

The spearhead of the "front of refusal" is the extremist Palestinian terrorist organization headed by George Habash, which was responsible for the massacre of 13 Israelis in Kiryat Shemona

The conclusion was that the ballad had been passed down to the nasherwoman orally, over more than your centuries.

That was something of hombshell to scholars at the turn that the oral tradition, while still alive in parts of the Hispanic world, had long since died in Castille. The discovery was propitious as it corresponded with the flourishing of interest in the roots of Spanish culture.

For Menendes Pidal and Maria Goyn, the washerwoman episode was an early highlight in the TOKYO. April 15 (AP).~ Farmers have uncovered the most complete skeleton ever found in China of a manimoth, an extinct type of elephant that lived more than 10,000 years ago, a Peking broadcast said today.

The skeleton, found about 16 1 2 feet under ground in Chaoyuan County in the northeastern province of Hellungkiang, is of a woolly mammoth which weighed an estimated four or five tons when alive, the official Hsinhua news agency reported. # FRENCH FASHIONS

Why Stores Don't Have Size 12+

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS, April 15 (IHT).-There are a number of French shops where to be size 12, or over, seems a sin. As you announce your size, everything comes to a dead halt while the se lesgirl gives you that too-muchis-too-much look.

The frustration is all the greater because these are often the shops that carry the pretticst styles, the ones that are in the women's magazines. Comes a time in every woman's life when she. too, would like to join the fashion parade. But no such luck. Matron she is, as a matron she will dress.

Martine Grandval. who as a designer and retailer 'MG store on Rue Bonaparte, knows the problem, has a partial explanation for it.

"First of all." she said, "the so-called stylistes are called in by big manufacturers to supply new ideas—and make a few headlines, So far. so good, Things get complicated when it turns out that most stylists can throw a lot of sketches and ideas down on paper but are incapable of doing a thorough pattern job. which takes time and is expensive. At this point, the stylist, having done her job, bids goodbye to the manufacturer-and what ends up in the store is something else again."

Lack of Background

"Very few stylists." Miss Grandval claims, "hav, a strong technical background and can alees whether this or that style is expandable to size 12 and 14. "They forget that every time they design a dress, the sizing should be studied dress by dress because it varies considerably according to shape and fabric." In passing, Miss Grandval paid tribute to ready-made clothes designed by couturters. "There's no way a ready-to-wear manufacturer can come anywhere near a conture house when it comes to making patterns," she said which explains why it is easier for conturiers to expand their ready-to-wear operations all over the world. They have the know-were relentlessly colobrating what was culled the "youth culture" in plays, movies and books. Now they are absorbed in nostalgia-works about the 1900s, 1930s, 1940s and 1950s.

Why the sudden shift in interest? Dr. E. Arthur Livingston, a Manhattan psychiatrist, says that it marks a retreat from reality, a pervasive mood of depression and anomic, a loss of sense of the self. There is so great a need for escape to times that seem simpler and in a sense more pastoral that the product is bring packaged commercially." he said Escapism rather than nostalgla is at the root of the present cycle, Dr. Livingston believes, "Science-faction films are also doing quite well." he pointed out, "And you can scarcely be nostalgic about the

Trade Bill May Not Pass In U.S. in '74

Problem of Timing Faces Senate Panel

By Edwin L. Dale Ir. WASHINGTON, April 15 (NTT).-There is a distinct posshillty that Congress will not enact the trade bill this year despite fairly widespread support for it after more than a year's work by the administration and

If the bill, already passed by the House, fails to clear the Senate, work on it will have to tart all over again in a new longress next year. And the planned international trade negotiations known as the Tokyo Round, on which preliminary laks are under way, would almost certainly be aborted.

The problem in the Senate is more one of time than of opposition to the main provisions of the hill, although one provision, involving trade with the Soviet Union, is intensely controversial. In addition, organized labor opposes the bill as it passed the House. But both congressional administration observers doubt that this alone would kill

Lack of Enthusiasm

Given the scheduling difficulties in the Senate, a major problem facing the bill is an apparent facing the out of it, cer-lack of enthusiasm for it, certainly among the public. One ter senator on the Finance Committee, although accepting that the administration feels it must have new negotiating authority and other changes in the present 12-year-old law, asked a staff member the other day: "Just who is gung-ho for this damn bill anyway?"

The senators, said a knowl-rogeable staff man, are "apa-The bill would give the President new authority to negotiate reductions of tariffs and other rade barriers, would provide new provisions for relief of U.S. inimport competition and would nite numerous other changes. The most controversial provian would allow lower, or "most-inged-nation," tariffs on imocts from Communist countries. ## U.S. Aide Fears Energy Waste As Crisis Ends

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP-DJ) .- U.S. environmental protection administrator Russel Train said yesterday he fears the nation "is going to go back to its wasteful ways" of consuming energy now that the Arab oil embargo has

" I think that we're very complacent about this, not really recognizing that we're in for a long-term energy problem in this country," he said. "We've got to make up our minds ... that we'd better start giving the highest possible priority to reducing the use of energy,"

Mr. Train, appearing on a television program, said a switch to smaller cars is "probably the largest single energy saving that we could make." He noted that the market is already pushing auto makers "very strongly in this direction," but warned that any letup might call either for government regulation or a tax on engine size.

Iraq nationalized the American and Dutch interests in Basrah Petroleum Co., effectively going be-yond the 25 percent ownership. Accords Undermined

But the upheaval in world oil prices last year, particularly after the October war, undermined the original participation agreements. With prices soaring more than 300 percent and consumers scrambling to obtain long-term supplies, the governments of the producing nations discovered that they could market more oil directly, at better prices, by tak-ing over majority control of pro-

The IPS inquiry into the transaction essentially confirms what independent analysts have long contended—that the stock sale was not unconditional and Mediobanca was not as unrelated to ITT as IRS criteria required.

But the tax agency's analysis, copy of which was obtained by the Wall Street Journal, discloses a number of details about the transaction that either had not been disclosed previously or had not been confirmed by a government inquiry.

Signs of Haste

Even though the IRS had many months to conduct its investigation, its printed findings show signs of last-minute revision and hasty assembly. Some pages appear to have been typed on different typewriters from others. And some of the report's conclusions are stated to be "inferences" from less than complete evidence rather than ironclad, unchallengeable conclusions from total documentation.

BUD

The Brando I Knew By Carlo Fiore. Delacorte Press. 294 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Mel Gussow

MARLON BRANDO has just turned 50. Marlon Brando at half-century? Por almost 30 years. from "A Streetcar Named Desire" to "Last Tango in Paris," Mr. Brando has captured the imagina-tion and teased the curiosity of the American people. Is he our greatest, or merely our most influential, actor? The more he has removed himself from his public, the more he has been written about, much of it masquerading as "unauthorized," in his case a euphemism for "unauthoritative."

While waiting for the definitive word, one can read "Bud: The Brando I Knew," a personal memoir by a friend, Carlo Flore. (Bud is Mr. Brando's childhood nickname to distinguish him from his father, Marlon Brando sr.) This, says the subtitle, is "the untold story of Brando's private life," which puts it in direct con-trast to the stack of post-"Tango" quickie biographies that reiterated "told" stories. Mr. Figre occasionally lapses into old anecdotes— such as the time that Mr. Brando tied the young Wally Cox to a tree and left him there-but mostly this is a first-hand, close-up impression, with the emphasis on Mr. Brando's early years as an

Mr. Fiore is like one of Hemingway's old fishing companions reminiscing about Papa's prowess at sea, except that he is here to testify about Mr. Brando's virility. They met in 1944 as young actors in Erwin Piscator's Dramatic Workshop, but while Mr. Fiore never shared Mr. Brando's pas-sion for acting, they were equally enthusiastic about women (and, apparently, women were equally enthusiastic about them). On page 207 the author writes, "As every feminist who has read this far must understand by now if she hasn't chewed up the book in sheer rage, Marlon is also the Ultimate Male Chauvinist Pig." I could imagine the book being ravished at a women's consciousness-raising session.

The author is no casual ob-server, but an active catalyst in that male chauvinism. The book jacket describes him as "Mar-lon's confidant, critic, employee, go-fer, co-author, procurer, standin and dialogue coach." He served in all those capacities, with em-phasis particularly on his role as procurer, Often Mr. Fiore would take a new female conquest of his to Mr. Brando's place and the actor would bed her (usually with Mr. Fiore's silent consent)—although it is clear that Mr. Brando found many women on his own. In the course of this brisk book we learn a great deal about Mr. Brando's sex life, which, admittedly, is enough to assure a certain commercial success. Mr. Fiore aiso gives us valuable glimp other aspects of this extraordinary man. The Brando that emerges is a mass of contradictions and, in most respects, very unlike Stanley Kowalski. He was devoted to his mother (an affectionate portrait by Mr. Fiore) although ambivalent about his father. He is generous with his friends, and occasionally brutal with intruders -a practical joker, a man of insatiable appetites (with an addiction for "junk food") and in some areas rigid to the point of being moralistic. One of his continuing conflicts with the authors of the continuing conflicts with the authors with the second to the continuing conflicts with the second to the continuing continuing continuing the c is over Mr. Fiore's use of drugs From the first, he is seen as man of enormous raw talent even when in his earliest work he is ignored by the critics. Mr. Figre is often, eagerly, backstage watching Mr. Brando—in "I Remember Mama," "Truckline Café." "Candida," "Streetcar," The picture is of an actor so obsessed that in or der to play a man half-drowned, he had himself drenched with buckets of water before every performance. intensity. As Mr. Brando turns from str to films, the author's proximity dins (and so do his perceptions).

Their relationship is erratic. He skims through Mr. Brando's career, omitting most of the pictures in which he was not personally involved. He was dialogue coach on "Sayonara," and he of-fers an indelicate (and amusing story about a journey to a geisha house. South and West had an unusual exchange in the most dramatic deal of the final of the Vanderbilt knockout team championship played during the American Con-tract League's Spring Nationals. The bidding followed the course shown in the diagram. The opening two-club bid was strong and artificial, and the response of two spades showed three controls, counting an ace as two and a king as one. The remaining bidding was natural and when the partnership failed to find a fit they settled in six no-trump. West had unusual difficulty in finding an opening lead. He thought hard, left the table still deep in thought, and returned with an apology for his tardiness. His cards were face downwards on the table, and at this point South playfully shuffled them around, selected one, face down, and recommended it to West as

West inspected it suspiciously, put it aside, and thought again, Finally he announced to South, "All right, beat your own slam," and turned over the card, which was the spade six. South captured the ten of spades with the king, and had little choice but to continue spades. He played the ace, planning to continue in the hope of a three-three division, If West had held a second spade the declarer would have persevered with spades and gone down, But when West discarded, the spades became a lost cause.

The only hope at this point was to take eight tricks in the red suits and arrange for an endplay in clubs. So South cashed two top hearts, dropping the Jack and led to the ten in dummi. He returned to the diamond acc. cashed the remaining heart winner, and played three more rounds of diamonds. He was now in dummy with the ace-queen-ten of clubs as the last three cards. West was reduced to the king-jack-nine of clubs, and was endplayed when the queen was

Yanks' 9 Homers Only Gain Split

The New York Yankees hit nine home runs here yesterday off some tender Cleveland pitching. Graig Nettles hit four of them. But their own pitching failed them again, and the Yankees lost the second game of a long doubleheader, 9-6, after winning the first, 9-5. There were 51 hits in the two games.

The result was that this series went to Cleveland, three games to one, and the New York road trip wound up with two victories and four defeats.

Apart from Nettles's four, two in each game, other Yankee homers were hit by Bobby Murcer, who had two, Thurman Munson, Ron Blomberg and Mike Hegan. Murcer's were his first extrabase hits of the season, Six were hit in the opener.

Through the seventh inning the first game had been a pitching duel between Steve Kline and Bob Johnson with the Indians and Johnson ahead. 3-2, thanks to a two-run homer by Charlie Spikes. Johnson then was lifted in the eighth with two men on base and one out. To the mound came Ton Hilgendorf. Cleveland's best relie pitcher last season and the only left-hander on the staff. His first pitch was hit over the fence by Nettles, scoring three runs. In the ninth, Murcer, Nettles and Hegan hit home runs for four more runs off Hilgendorf pitches before Tom was taken out, his earned run average standing at 19.8. A's 4, 2, Rangers 2, 10

At Oakland, Dave Nelson drove in six runs with a three-runhomer, single and sacrifice fly to give Ferguson Jenkins and the Texas Rangers a 10-2 nightcap victory after the A's won the opener, 4-2, on a pair of homers Reggie Jackson. Nelson hit his homer off loser

Johnny Mercer Sings Songs of Johnny Mercer

By Henry Pleasants

TONDON (IHT).—At a time when most singers of his age (64) are more likely to be talking about singing than doing it granting exceptions for Bing Crosby and Perry Como-Johnny Mercer is just beginning to feel his vocal cats.

One reason, of course, is that for the past 40 years he has been too busy writing songs for others to sing. When you hear "One for My Baby," "Come Rain or Come Shine," "Laura," "Moon River," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Jeepers, Creepers," "Blues in the Night," "Autumn Leaves" and "That Old Black Magic," you think of Frank Sinatra, Andy Williams, Nat King Cole, Billie Holiday and many other singers who have found in Mercer's lyrics the seeds of musical evergreens.

He is busy with words here right now, too, doing the lyrics for the songs André Previn is writing for a new musical based on J. B. Priestley's "The Good Companions," scheduled to open in July. But he is also taking time off from the typewriter to slip over to the Pye studios in Bryanston Street and cut a couple of albums on which "Johnny Mercer Sings the Songs of Johnny Mercer."

It all began last summer when Mercer was in London, and Ken Barnes asked him to take part in a BBC radio program he runs called "The Song Stylists." Barnes suggested to a dubious Johnny Mercer that he try his voice on a ballad type of song that Mercer had always thought better left to the Sinatras of this world. The results were both surprising and pleasing, not least to Johnny Mercer. They encouraged him, with Ken Barnes as prodder and producer, to venture his first

It's a sound to hear and a sight to see. Now sporting a grayish stubble beard, and with rimmed spectacles shading brown roguish eyes, Mercer stands off in a corner of the studio behind mike and music stand, out of sight to the jazz band backing him, arms extended as if in tenuous flight, portly body swaying to rhythms of the swing era, and you recall Leonard Feather's assessment of him as a singer in "The Encyclopedia of Jazz": "A good rhythm singer in a semi-jazz vein." What is astonishing to one who remembers descriptions of a "high distinctive voice" is a bassbaritone sound in which you hear echoes of Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra and Billy Eckstine

"I suppose I really have two voices," he observed a day later in the Mayfair flat he and his wife, Ginger, have taken while "The Good Companions" is in preparation. "The baritone is my natural voice. The high-pitched voice is one that Paul Whiteman wished on me, or encouraged. I joined his band in 1932 after winning a Paul Whiteman Pontiac Youth of America contest, and became one of the third set of Rhythm Boys, Paul at that time, bad a thing about Amos 'n' Andy, He wanted to work that kind of dialogue into some songs for Jack Teagarden and me. Jack was already well established as a baritone, so Paul just said, 'Jack will sing low, you sing high.

"I had had previous experience taking the top voice in bibulous quartet singing down in Savannah, Ga., where I was born and raised, when we would get together in a bar or a car and have fun with some of those wonderful old songs like the one about the goat that used to eat the laundry off the clothes lines. Remember it? The family decided to solve the problem by tying the goat to the railroad tracks, but the goat threw up a red flannel shirt and flagged the train. Which reminds me: whatever did become of humor?

"But to get back to Whiteman, I'm a good mimic, so I had no trouble with the Amos 'n' Andy-like routines. Later on I sang on radio and made records with other singers, notably with Bing Crosby and Nat Cole, both baritones, So there I was on top again, which is why people who heard me on radio in Bing's Kraft Music Hall programs, or on my records with Nat, think of my voice as high-pitched."

What Mercer had said about his gift for mimicry-his wife calls him a chameleon -and the echoes of other singers in his way with a song, suggest a capacity for assimilation that probably has a lot to do with his preference, as a lyric writer, for setting words to melodies already composed.

"At a guess," he said, "not more than 10 percent of the songs I have written began with my lyric. I seem to need the mood established by a good melody. It gives me something to adapt myself to. The tune, if you're lucky, will suggest both a subject and a manner of approaching it. The rest is hard work."

One is tempted to add: and an affinity for language, the ear and the instinct that told him, for example, to change the dead leaves of Joseph Kosma's "Les Feuilles Mortes," a hit for Juliette Greco, to be "Autumn Leaves" that became a hit for Nat Cole, or that found in the words "do. do that voo-do" in a song by Cole Porter the poetic germ of "That Old Black Magic." If Mercer's adaptability has much to do with the way he matches voice to song when he sings, or matches words to melody when he writes, it probably also explains why he has been able to work successfully and compatibly with a greater variety of composers than any other lyric writer. He speaks admiringly and affectionately of them all. They include Jerome Kern, Richard Whiting, Harry Warren, Henry Mancini, Michel Legrand, Johnny Van Heusen and, most especially, Harold Arlen. He is also the first to acknowledge his debt to the many excellent singers who have sung his songs and come up with big hits. He would be the last to suggest, as one would who had heard Sinatra sing "One for My Baby" or Billie Holiday sing "Come Rain or Come Shine" or Billy Daniels sing "That Old Black Magic," that Mercer lyrics tend to make a fine melody articulate and to bring out the best in a

Italian film star Gina Lollobrigida, 45, flew into Johannesburg over the weekend and did some name calling. She said that heart transplant surgeon Christian Barnard, with whom her name was once linked, was an "idiot," according to a UPI report.

Told of Lollobrigida's remarks, Barnard said, "I don't care." His first wife, Aletta, published Love Letters From Gina to Barnard." During subsequent court action, the actress said that she could not "blame myself for having had a sincere feeling for a man the whole world loved and admired at the time." She lost the action against Barnard's wife and a German magazine, Now, she says, "I have no wish to see this man again. He is an idiot, a cheap publicity-seeker. I am a top film star.

maintaining a public posture of support for Spine President Nixon tried Agnew. through his aides to persuade the Vice-President to resign last fall, according to a new book on the Agnew case. The maneuvers are described in "A Heartbeat Away," by Washington Post reporters Richard M. Cohen and Jules Witcover.

Alexander Haig, chief of the White House staff, is said to have served as the go-between for Nixon in dealings with Agnew his attorneys. Agnew eventually made a deal with the Justice Department, resigned Oct. 10 and pleaded no contest to a single charge of tax evasion.

Nixon's dilemma, according to Cohen and Witcover, was how to deal with Agnew in view of the fact that he did not want a precedent set. In particular, the book says, Nixon was worried about Agnew's taking what was called the "impeachment track." "This option ... was fraught with ommous parallels for the President himself." The authors say that the decisive incident behind Agnew's resignation was a Sept. 10 meeting involving the Vice-President, one of his lawyers, presidential counsel J. Fred Buz-hardt and Haig. "Abandoning the White House's addiction to circumlocution and subtlety," the authors say of Haig, he Agnew have it. The Vice-President had to resign. It was a simple, straightforward demand. and Haig kept hammering away at it."
